

In our kinder room these days...

Annie

One day, a child was talking about pumpkin seeds that he planted and how so much pumpkins grew from it. I wanted to expand the children's experience so I put some beans in wet cotton to observe what would happen. The children have been checking on the beans every day excitedly and today, we noticed that one of the beans grew outstandingly. We talked about them and read some books about trees. It was an interesting sight to see life growing right before our eyes.

A child told me that it must be the magic bean of the book 'Jack and the Beanstalk' and that it will grow through the roof.

The children measured how tall our beanstalk is with rulers. This measurement exploration helps them understand basic measurement vocabulary and concepts like Weight, height, length.
